Cindy's Matrimonial Affairs Not All Her Own.

Town Gossips Had Their Ears Close to the Ground and Very Little of Real Moment Got Away From Them.

"Yep, I got that horse when it was a teeny colt 'long back—let's see—well, 'bout the time Cindy contemplated matrimony. Ma made that rag carpet the year of—yep, the year Cindy thought of gettin' married. The old Baptist church was the biggest thing in town the year—well, the year Cindy was serious 'bout hitchin' up, you see. Was it or was it not the year afore or after? By heck! It was the same year she was thinkin' if she'd—Cindy, I mean—take St. Slocom or Es Pembehook. The blacksmith shop burned down, Abe Foot's corner, as well as fourteep hens, six pellets, and nine Pekin ducks went up in feathers and smoke—strange how dates mix up. It was when Cindy got the notion in her foot head that she'd lived a life of singleness enough. Then the new school teacher come and took the new doestrick school just 'bout when Cindy got hotheaded and turned down Li Jenkins; he had a new buggy; and Sim Cook had two colts. Sim didn't have any new buggy, but he had a mor'gage on Li's twenty-acre farm. Cindy got left on both deals; but she held on to her passhun for doublin' up, she did."

"It seems that about everything hinged upon Cindy's affair of love. All starts or ends about the time she contemplated matrimony."

"Yep, that's what it does. Ma got her teeth then the same year; pa bought a new hayfork and had the new cow barn painted red, the colt run 'way with the milk wagon and we lost forty quarts of milk that summer; the dern creek alushed over and the hog pen was split into kindlin' down on the flats; Jim Parker broke his collarbone liftin' a keg of cherry brandy, on a bet in Perkins's place; Mose Juddins was beat for pathmaster and I was put in postmaster at The Corners the same year; Tildy Brown went to the town high school, and the steeple fell down the year Cindy contemplated."

"And how did Cindy come out?"

"Come out? Say, she went and done it."

Not the Royal Salute.

It happened to the queen as princess of Wales, when she was at one of the great cities of Upper India, and is here quoted from a recent book entitled, "An American Girl at the Durbar."

The princess wished to see the place quietly for herself, and asked a young police officer to escort her, and to be sure to tell no one about it beforehand. So off they started on foot through the bazaar, and the princess, who was dressed in a thick veil and topi, enjoyed it all immensely.

But at the first police outpost on the road the constables, seeing their police sahib coming, turned out in full force, and saluted with a clatter of arms as they passed.

"Now I particularly asked that there might be none of this," reproached the princess.

"Oh, it's not your royal highness they are saluting; it's I!" explained the young officer, blushing mightily.

And therat the princess saw her mistake, and laughed at herself mightily, too.—Youth's Companion.

Education in Samos.

If Stromboli is the lighthouse of the Mediterranean, Samos possesses what a native writer has described as the "Lighthouse of the Levant." A moral and intellectual lighthouse, that is to say—the college named Pythagoreum, after the greatest of Samians. This college attracts students from Crete and many other islands, and stands at the head of a remarkably creditable educational system. Fourteen years ago Mr. William Miller noted that Samos had one school for every thousand of the population, and was far from content with that, there being a strong movement for agricultural, kindergarten and higher female education. Samos, as a rich island with no national debt, is not crippled by the rates difficulty which tempers popular enthusiasm for education in some countries.

Underpaid Ambassadors.

Mr. Bryce, in resigning his post at Washington, resigns also $50,000 a year, a sum which probably gave rise to Sala's phrase concerning special correspondents, that they have the "salary of an ambassador." On the other hand, the American ambassador in London has to represent the United States on a salary of $17,500. Mr. Reid's predecessor, Mr. Choate, used to declare that $50,000 would scarcely cover the expenses of the office. An American biographer tells how a man was found wandering in the dead of night around Trafalgar square by a kind hearted constable, who recommended him to go home. "Home!" exclaimed the wanderer. "I have no home. I'm the American ambassador!"

They Never Drown.

"What's Hardluck doing these days?"

"Teaching his sorrows to swim."

"Teaching his sorrows to swim?"

"Yes, trying to drown them in booze."
